Venezuelan Presidente Nicolas Maduro condenado a más de

21 años de prisión

El presidente de Venezuela, Nicolas Maduro, fue condenado el lunes a más de 21 años de prisión después de admitir haber suministrado armas a rebeldes financiados por drogas.

Cliver Alcalá, de 62 años, de Caracas, Venezuela, fue sentenciado por el juez federal Alvin K. Hellerstein en Manhattan después de declararse culpable el año pasado de cargos que respaldaban a un grupo terrorista y suministraba armas a las Fuerzas Armadas Revolucionarias de Colombia, o FARC - considerada por EE. UU. como una organización terrorista extranjera.

Los fiscales habían buscado una pena de prisión de 30 años, diciendo que había aceptado millones de dólares en sobornos de cocaína. Sus abogados habían solicitado una sentencia de seis años. Hellerstein ordenó que pasara 21 años y ocho meses en prisión.

En un comunicado después del juicio, el abogado de EE. UU. Damian Williams dijo que Alcalá y sus cómplices intentaron weaponizar la cocaína al ayudar a las FARC con las armas mientras se enviaban toneladas de drogas a los EE. UU.

Dijo que Alcalá "corrompió las instituciones vitales de su propio país a medida que ayudaba a las FARC a inundar este país con cocaína - pero ya no. En su lugar, pasará más de dos décadas en una prisión de los Estados Unidos."

Los fiscales dijeron que Alcalá comenzó en 2006 a aprovechar su posición en el ejército venezolano, donde comandaba a miles de oficiales militares fuertemente armados, para apoyar la distribución de las toneladas de cocaína con destino a EE. UU. de las FARC.

Alcalá se entregó en Colombia en 2024 para enfrentar una acusación en Nueva York que lo acusaba, junto con Maduro y una docena de líderes militares y políticos, de una conspiración amplia para utilizar Venezuela como trampolín para inundar los EE. UU. con cocaína.

Sus abogados argumentaron en documentos judiciales que durante años antes de su arresto su cliente vivió modestamente en Colombia en un pequeño apartamento alquilado, un auto más antiguo y solo R$ 3,000 en su cuenta bancaria.

En una entrevista el mes pasado con The Associated Press, Alcalá dijo que ha leído más de 200 libros en la cárcel y ha reflexionado sobre sus elecciones, equivocaciones y arrepentimientos mientras se mantiene en forma con una carrera diaria de cinco millas en una caminadora.
