A Goliath bet is a form of multiple bet which consists of 247 bets over eight different selections. It has 28 doubles, 56 trebles, 70 four-fold accumulators, 56 five-fold accumulators, 28 six-fold accumulators, eight seven-fold accumulators and one eight-fold accumulator. Although it has a significantly higher stake than a traditional accumulator, it does make a return more likely.

How To Place A Goliath Bet On Horse Racing

As a horse racing specialist, there's no better site to place a goliath bet than Fitzdares. And it's fairly easy to do too.

If you haven't signed up yet, make sure to sign up with the Fitzdares welcome offer. When you've done that and signed in, head to the horse racing section listed in the left column.

From here, click on the races of interest and select the horse you like. You'll need to do this eight times.

The selections will appear on your betting slip but the option for a Goliath bet isn't visible straight away. click on the 'show more multiples' and more will appear, including a Goliath bet.

When you've found the Goliath bet option you'll then need to add a stake. Remember to take into account that you'll be making 247 bets, so unless you want to stake hundreds of thousands, be sure to keep it low. In our example, we're betting 10p.

Once you've added the stake, you're all set. Place your Goliath bet by clicking the yellow 'Place Bet' button and then sit back.

Regions of Oceania

Australasia is a subregion of Oceania, comprising Australia, New Zealand and some neighbouring islands in the Pacific Ocean. The term is used in a number of different contexts, including geopolitically, physiogeographically, philologically, and ecologically, where the term covers several slightly different but related regions.

Derivation and definitions [edit]

Australia's concept of Australasia, which includes Australia, New Zealand and, in this case, Melanesia

Charles de Brosses coined the term (as French Australasie) in Histoire des navigations aux terres australes[1] (1756). He derived it from the Latin for "south of Asia" and differentiated the area from Polynesia (to the east) and the southeast Pacific (Magellanica).[2]
